philosopher terry pinkard revisits sartre s later work illuminating a pivotal stance in sartre s understanding of freedom and communal action jean paul sartre s critique of dialectical reason released to great fanfare in 1960 has since then receded in philosophical visibility as sartre s reputation is now making a comeback it is time for a reappraisal of his later work in practice power and forms of life philosopher terry pinkard interprets sartre s late work as a fundamental reworking of his earlier ideas especially in terms of his understanding of the possibility of communal action as genuinely free which the french philosopher had previously argued was impossible pinkard reveals how sartre was drawn back to hegel a move that was itself incited by sartre s newfound interest in marxism pinkard argues that sartre constructed a novel position on freedom that has yet to be adequately taken up and analyzed within philosophy and political theory through sartre pinkard advances an argument that contributes to the history of philosophy as well as key debates on action and freedom this landmark volume from an influential group of anglican theologians explores baptism as the foundation for living out all forms of christian vocation in confirmation marriage ordination and religious life it offers theological and pastoral perspectives on the centrality and significance of baptism for a church that has perhaps lost a sense of the radical commitment that baptism calls for it explores the meaning of vows today as promise covenant oath rule and explores the difference between religious and secular vows it considers the nature of the vows under which all christians live and the particular vows such as marriage and ordination embraced by some together these perceptive reflections offer a theological and pastoral resource for activating every christian s the sense of call and response whatever their mode of life
